- text/texts: Text and texts are generic terms referring all forms of oral, written, visual, and digital communication:
  - Oral texts include speeches, poems, plays, and oral stories.
  - Written texts include novels, articles, and short stories.
  - Visual texts include posters, photographs, and other images.
  - Digital texts include electronic forms of all the above.
  - Oral, written, and visual elements can be combined (e.g., in dramatic presentations, graphic novels, films, web pages, advertisements).

- prior knowledge: personal stories and experiences

- reading, listening, and viewing strategies: examples include distinguishing drawing from writing, asking questions to construct and clarify meaning, using active listening, predicting, making connections to self

- foundational concepts of print, oral, and visual texts: concepts include directionality of print, difference between letter and word, difference between writing and drawing, spacing, letter-sound relationship, understanding that pictures convey meaning, taking turns, expressing ideas and needs, and role-playing

- engage actively as listeners, viewers, and readers: connecting to personal knowledge, experiences, and traditions; participating in community and cultural traditions and practices; asking questions related to the topic at hand

- story/stories: narrative texts, whether real or imagined, that teach us about human nature, motivation, and experience, and often reflect a personal journey or strengthen a sense of identity. They may also be considered the embodiment of collective wisdom. Stories can be oral, written, or visual, and used to instruct, inspire, and entertain listeners and readers.

- structure of story: beginning, middle, end (or first, then, last)

- exchange ideas and perspectives: taking turns in offering ideas related to the topic at hand, focusing on the speaker without interrupting, and generally contributing to the discussion

- plan and create stories and other texts: involves experimenting with print and storytelling; supporting communication, including through stories and the use of manipulatives such as puppets, storyboards, digital tools, and toys

- oral storytelling processes: creating an original story or finding an existing story (with permission), sharing the story from memory with others, using vocal expression to clarify the meaning of the text
• structure of story: beginning, middle, end (or first, then, last)
• literary elements and devices: examples include sound concepts (e.g., rhyme, rhythm, musical, and poetical qualities of language) and humorous and creative texts (e.g., tongue twisters, nursery rhymes, fables, traditional stories)
• reading strategies: making meaning using predictions and connections; making meaning from story using pictures, patterns, memory, and prior knowledge; retelling some elements of story; and recognizing familiar words/names and environmental print (e.g., street signs, food packaging)
• oral language strategies: adjusting volume, pace, tone, and articulation; focusing on the speaker; taking turns; asking questions related to the topic; making personal connections; making relevant contributions to discussion
• metacognitive strategies: talking and thinking about learning (e.g., through reflecting, questioning, goal setting, self-evaluating) to develop awareness of self as a reader and as a writer
• concepts of print: the conventional features of written English, such as:
  – the symbolic nature of writing
  – the correspondence of spoken words to printed words (one-to-one matching)
  – the association of letters and sounds
  – the distinctive features of letters and words
  – the correspondence between uppercase and lowercase letters
  – left-to-right directionality
  – the use of space to mark word boundaries
  – the use of specific signs and symbols for punctuation (e.g., period, exclamation point, question mark)
  – front and back of a book
• letter knowledge: recognizing and naming most letters of the alphabet, recognizing most letter-sound matches, recognizing some familiar words
• phonemic and phonological awareness: Phonological refers to the sounds of words (as opposed to their meanings):
  – Phonemic awareness is a specific aspect of a learner’s phonological awareness: a child’s ability to segment spoken words into phonemes (e.g., c / a / t) and to blend phonemes into words indicates a developing phonemic awareness.
  – Phonological awareness involves the abilities to hear and create rhyming words, segment the flow of speech into separate words, and hear syllables as “chunks” in spoken words.
• letter formation: the use of scribble writing or letter strings to communicate meaning; distinguishes drawing from writing read fluently at grade level: reading with comprehension, phrasing, and attention to punctuation

prior knowledge: personal stories and experiences

reading, listening, and viewing strategies: examples include making predictions, making connections, making simple inferences, asking questions, engaging in conversation with peers and adults, showing respect for the contribution of others

foundational concepts of print, oral, and visual texts: concepts include directionality of print, difference between letter and word, difference between writing and drawing, spacing, letter-sound relationship, understanding that pictures convey meaning, taking turns, expressing ideas and needs, role-playing, and phonological awareness

engage actively as listeners, viewers, and readers: connecting to personal knowledge, experiences, and traditions; participating in community and cultural traditions and practices; asking questions related to the topic at hand

They may also be considered the embodiment of collective wisdom. Stories can be oral, written, or visual, and used to instruct, inspire, and entertain listeners and readers structure and elements of story: Students can use the vocabulary needed to talk about a story, such as beginning, middle, end, and main character; and can follow events in sequence.

story in First Peoples cultures: Traditional and contemporary First Peoples stories take many forms (e.g., prose, song, dance, poetry, theatre, carvings, pictures) and are told for several purposes:
- teaching (e.g., life lessons, community responsibilities, rites of passage)
- sharing creation stories
- recording personal, family, and community histories
- “mapping” the geography and resources of an area
- ensuring cultural continuity (e.g., knowledge of ancestors, language)
- healing
- entertainment

exchange ideas and perspectives: involves taking turns in offering ideas related to the topic at hand, focusing on the speaker without interrupting, and generally contributing to the discussion communication forms: examples include lists, journals, notes, simple stories, digital presentations, oral presentations, pictures, drama (e.g., puppet shows, dance, plays, storyboards) used to communicate ideas and information conventions of Canadian spelling, grammar, and punctuation: common practices in writing, such as capitals and small letters printed legibly; familiar words spelled correctly; and correct use of periods, question marks, and capitals (including capitalized I); introduction to Canadian spelling

oral storytelling processes: creating an original story or finding an existing story (with permission), sharing the story from memory with others, using vocal expression to clarify the meaning of the text
Content – Elaborations

ENGLISH LANGUAGE ARTS
Grade 1

- elements of story: setting, character, events (few details)
- literary elements and devices: poetic language, figurative language, sound play, images, colour, symbols
- vocabulary to talk about texts: book, page, chapter, author, title, illustrator, pictures, web page, website, and search box
- reading strategies: using illustrations and prior knowledge to predict meaning; rereading; retelling in own words; locating the main idea and details; using knowledge of language patterns and phonics to decode words; identifying familiar and “sight” words; monitoring (asking: Does it look right? Sound right? Make sense?); self-correcting errors consistently using three cueing systems: meaning, structure, and visual
- oral language strategies: adjusting volume, pace, tone, and articulation; focusing on the speaker; taking turns; asking questions related to the topic; making personal connections; and making relevant contributions to discussion
- metacognitive strategies: talking and thinking about learning (e.g., through reflecting, questioning, goal setting, self-evaluating) to develop awareness of self as a reader and as a writer
- writing processes: may include revising, editing, considering audience
- concepts of print: the conventional features of written English, such as:
  - the symbolic nature of writing
  - the correspondence of spoken words to printed words (one-to-one matching)
  - the association of letters and sounds
  - the distinctive features of letters and words
  - the correspondence between uppercase and lowercase letters
  - left-to-right directionality
  - the use of space to mark word boundaries
  - the use of specific signs and symbols for punctuation (e.g., period, exclamation point, question mark)
- print awareness: understanding the nature and uses of print, including letters and print symbols; children’s print awareness is closely associated with their word awareness (the ability to recognize words as distinct elements of oral and written communication) and is an important precursor to literacy development and early reading achievement; includes awareness of the differences between letters, words, and sentences
- phonemic and phonological awareness: Phonological refers to the sounds of words (as opposed to their meanings):
  - Phonemic awareness is a specific aspect of a learner’s phonological awareness: a child’s ability to segment spoken words into phonemes (e.g., /c/ a /t/) and to blend phonemes into words indicates a developing phonemic awareness.
  - Phonological awareness involves the abilities to hear and create rhyming words, segment the flow of speech into separate words, and hear syllables as “chunks” in spoken words.
- letter formation: legible printing with spacing between letters and words
- sentence structure: the structure of simple sentences
- conventions: common practices in punctuation (e.g., the use of a period or question mark at end of sentence) and in capitalization (e.g., capitalizing the first letter of the first word at the start of a sentence, people’s names, and the pronoun I)

Curricular Competencies

Using oral, written, visual, and digital texts, students are expected individually and collaboratively to be able to:

Comprehend and connect (reading, listening, viewing)

- Read fluently at grade level
- Use sources of information and prior knowledge to make meaning
- Use developmentally appropriate reading, listening, and viewing strategies to make meaning
- Recognize how different text structures reflect different purposes.
- Engage actively as listeners, viewers, and readers, as appropriate, to develop understanding of self, identity, and community
- Demonstrate awareness of the role that story plays in personal, family, and community identity
- Use personal experience and knowledge to connect to stories and other texts to make meaning
- Recognize the structure and elements of story
- Show awareness of how story in First Peoples cultures connects people to family and community

Create and communicate (writing, speaking, representing)

- Exchange ideas and perspectives to build shared understanding
- Create stories and other texts to deepen awareness of self, family, and community
- Plan and create a variety of communication forms for different purposes and audiences
- Communicate using sentences and most conventions of Canadian spelling, grammar, and punctuation
- Explore oral storytelling processes

(from In Our Own Words: Bringing Authentic First Peoples Content to the K–3 Classroom, FNESC/FNSA, 2012)

- how story in First Peoples cultures connects people to land: First Peoples stories were created to explain the landscape, the seasons, and local events.
- exchange ideas and perspectives: offering ideas related to the problem, asking relevant questions to find out and clarify others’ views, sharing opinions supported by reasons
- communication forms: examples include personal writing, letters, poems, multiple-page stories, simple expository text that is non-fiction and interest-based, digital presentations, oral presentations, visuals, dramatic forms used to communicate ideas and information.
- word knowledge: morphology, including roots, affixes, and suffixes
- oral traditions: the means by which culture is transmitted over generations other than through written records
  - Among First Peoples, oral tradition may consist of told stories, songs, and other types of distilled wisdom or information, often complemented by dance or various forms of visual representation, such as carvings or masks.
  - In addition to expressing spiritual and emotional truth (e.g., by symbol and metaphor), it provides a record of literal truth (e.g., about events and situations).
  - The oral tradition was once integrated into every facet of life of First Peoples and was the basis of the education system.
- oral storytelling processes: creating an original story or finding an existing story (with permission), sharing the story from memory with others, using vocal expression to clarify the meaning of the text

BIG IDEAS

Language and text
can be a source of creativity and joy.

Exploring stories and other texts helps us understand ourselves and make connections to others and to the world.

Texts can be understood from different perspectives.

Using language in creative and playful ways helps us understand how language works.

Questioning what we hear, read, and view contributes to our ability to be educated and engaged citizens.

Learning Standards

Curricular Competencies

Using oral, written, visual, and digital texts, students are expected individually and collaboratively to be able to:

Comprehend and connect (reading, listening, viewing)

- Access and integrate information and ideas from a variety of sources and from prior knowledge to build understanding
- Use a variety of comprehension strategies before, during, and after reading, listening, or viewing to deepen understanding of text
- Consider different purposes, audiences, and perspectives in exploring texts
- Apply a variety of thinking skills to gain meaning from texts
- Identify how differences in context, perspectives, and voice influence meaning in texts
- Recognize the role of language in personal, social, and cultural identity
- Use personal experience and knowledge to connect to text and deepen understanding of self, community, and world
- Respond to text in personal and creative ways
- Recognize how literary elements, techniques, and devices enhance meaning in texts
- Show an increasing understanding of the role of organization in meaning
- Demonstrate awareness of the oral tradition in First Peoples cultures and the purposes of First Peoples texts
- Identify how story in First Peoples cultures connects people to land

Content

Big Ideas – Elaborations

- story/stories: narrative texts, whether real or imagined, that teach us about human nature, motivation, and experience, and often reflect a personal journey or strengthen a sense of identity. They may also be considered the embodiment of collective wisdom. Stories can be oral, written, or visual, and used to instruct, inspire, and entertain listeners and readers.

- text/texts: Text and texts are generic terms referring to all forms of oral, written, visual, and digital communication:
  - Oral texts include speeches, poems, plays, and oral stories.
  - Written texts include novels, articles, and short stories.
  - Visual texts include posters, photographs, and other images.
  - Digital texts include electronic forms of all the above.
  - Oral, written, and visual elements can be combined (e.g., in dramatic presentations, graphic novels, films, web pages, advertisements).

  - Visual texts include posters, photographs, and other images.
  - Digital texts include electronic forms of all the above.
  - Oral, written, and visual elements can be combined (e.g., in dramatic presentations, graphic novels, films, web pages, advertisements).

- access and integrate information and ideas: positing questions; locating information; identifying main ideas and supporting details; using text features (table of contents, headings, index, glossary, diagrams, tables, charts); organizing information into graphics such as t-charts, Venn diagrams, flow charts, and timelines

- prior knowledge: personal stories and experiences

- comprehension strategies: examples include activating prior knowledge, making predictions, setting a purpose, making connections, asking questions, previewing written text, making inferences, drawing conclusions, using context clues

- thinking skills: examples include self-monitoring, reflecting, goal setting

- respond to text in personal and creative ways: expressing reactions and opinions, providing support for those, giving reasons for choice of favourite text

- organization in meaning: the use of paragraphing, chronological order, and order of importance to convey meaning in texts

- oral tradition in First Peoples cultures: the means by which culture is transmitted over generations other than through written records
  - Among First Peoples, oral tradition may consist of told stories, songs, and other types of distilled wisdom or information, often complemented by dance or various forms of visual representation, such as carvings or masks.
  - In addition to expressing spiritual and emotional truth (e.g., by symbol and metaphor), it provides a record of literal truth (e.g., about events and situations).
  - The oral tradition was once integrated into every facet of life of First Peoples and was the basis of the education system.

- purposes of First Peoples texts: including to teach life lessons and skills, to convey individual and community responsibilities, to share family and community histories, to explain the natural world, to record history, to map the geography of an area.

- how story in First Peoples cultures connects people to land: First Peoples stories were created to explain the landscape, the seasons, and local events.

- exchange ideas and perspectives: identifying opinions and viewpoints, asking clarifying questions, collaborating in large- and small-group activities, building on others’ ideas, disagreeing respectfully

- creative and playful ways: taking risks in trying out new word choices and formats; playing with words, structures, and ideas

- word knowledge: morphology, including roots, affixes, and suffixes

- oral storytelling processes: creating an original story or finding an existing story (with permission), sharing the story from memory with others, using vocal expression to clarify the meaning of the text, using non-verbal communication expressively to clarify the meaning, attending to stage presence, differentiating the storyteller’s natural voice from the characters’ voices, presenting the story efficiently, keeping the listener’s interest throughout

- diverse purposes: may include to inquire, to explore, to inform, to interpret, to explain, to take a position, to propose a solution, to entertain
- variety of sources: includes digital sources; students need to develop the language and tools to successfully navigate digital media (e.g., be familiar with terms and concepts such as browser, cookie, browsing history, hyperlinked text, thread, URL, posting etiquette, privacy)
- relevance: Students should be prompted to ask: Does it meet the purpose? Is it current? Does it add new information?
- accuracy: Students should be prompted to distinguish fact from opinion and to consider the source of the information.
- reliability: Students should be prompted to consider the credibility of the source
- inquiry: asking creative and critical questions supported and inspired by texts
- extend thinking: may include questioning and speculating, acquiring new ideas, analyzing and evaluating ideas, developing explanations, considering alternative points of view, summarizing, synthesizing, problem solving
- different features, forms, and genres of texts: vary depending on the purpose and audience of the text; students should be encouraged to consider the role of elements used in various texts (e.g., illustration in graphic novels, advertisements on websites, use of music, paragraph length, pause and pace in spoken word, use of colour)
- think critically, creatively, and reflectively: questioning, interpreting, comparing, and contrasting a range of texts (e.g., narrative, poetry, visual texts); useful strategies for students include “exit slips,” “one star, one wish,” and quick activities to identify thinking
- personal, social, and cultural contexts, values, and perspectives: Students should be prompted to consider the influence of family, friends, activities, religion, gender, and place on texts, and the relationship between text and context.
- how language constructs personal, social, and cultural identity: Our sense of individuality and belonging is a product of, for example, the language we use; oral tradition, story, and recorded history; cultural aspects; and formal and informal language use. Students should be prompted to consider the impact of language in their lives.
- personal, creative, and critical ways: Students should be prompted to analyze their personal connection to text, explain their responses (rational and emotional), and consider texts from different points of view.
- literary elements, techniques, and devices: may include characterization, mood, foreshadowing, conflict, protagonist/antagonist, theme, imagery, sound devices
- story/stories: narrative texts, whether real or imagined, that teach us about human nature, motivation, and experience, and often reflect a personal journey or strengthen a sense of identity. ## Big Ideas – Elaborations

- story/stories: narrative texts, whether real or imagined, that teach us about human nature, motivation, and experience, and often reflect a personal journey or strengthen a sense of identity. They may also be considered the embodiment of collective wisdom. Stories can be oral, written, or visual, and used to instruct, inspire, and entertain listeners and readers.

- text/texts: Text and texts are generic terms referring to all forms of oral, written, visual, and digital communication:
  - Oral texts include speeches, poems, plays, and oral stories.
  - Written texts include novels, articles, and short stories.
  - Visual texts include posters, photographs, and other images.
  - Digital texts include electronic forms of all the above.
  - Oral, written, and visual elements can be combined (e.g., in dramatic presentations, graphic novels, films, web pages, advertisements).
• text/texts: Text and texts are generic terms referring to all forms of oral, written, visual, and digital communication:
  - Oral texts include speeches, poems, plays, and oral stories.
  - Written texts include novels, articles, and short stories.
  - Visual texts include posters, photographs, and other images.
  - Digital texts include electronic forms of all the above.
  - Oral, written, and visual elements can be combined (e.g., in dramatic presentations, graphic novels, films, web pages, advertisements).

• diverse purposes: such as to inquire, to explore, to inform, to interpret, to explain, to take a position, to propose a solution, to entertain

• variety of sources: includes digital sources; students need to develop the language and tools to successfully navigate digital media (e.g., be familiar with terms and concepts such as browser, cookie, browsing history, hyperlinked text, thread, URL, posting etiquette, following social media, tweeting, privacy, digital identity)

• relevance: Students should be prompted to ask: Does it meet the purpose? Is it current? Does it add new information?

• accuracy: Students should be prompted to distinguish fact from opinion and to consider the source of the information.

• reliability: Students should be prompted to consider the authority of the source and whether it is a primary or secondary source.

• inquiry: asking creative and critical questions supported and inspired by texts

• extend thinking: questioning and speculating, acquiring new ideas, analyzing and evaluating ideas, developing explanations, considering alternative points of view, summarizing, synthesizing, problem solving

• different features, forms, and genres of texts: vary depending on the purpose and audience of the text; students should be encouraged to focus on the relationship between form and function (e.g., considering the role in various texts of elements such as illustration in graphic novels; advertisements on websites; lighting in film and photography; use of music, paragraph length, line breaks in poetry; pause and pace in spoken word; symbolic and emotional use of colour)

• think critically, creatively, and reflectively: questioning, interpreting, comparing, and contrasting a range of texts (e.g., narrative, poetry, visual texts); students should be encouraged to think outside the box, moving beyond the text and comparing texts; useful strategies include “exit slips,” “one star, one wish,” and quick activities to identify thinking

• personal, social, and cultural contexts, values, and perspectives: Students should be prompted to consider the influence of family, friends, activities, education, religion, gender, age, and place; to develop awareness that authors write from a perspective or point of view; and to consider the relationship between text and context.

• how language constructs personal, social, and cultural identity: Our sense of individuality and belonging is a product of the language we use; oral tradition, story, recorded history, and social media; voice; cultural aspects; and register. Students should recognize the impact of language in their lives.

• personal, creative, and critical ways: for example, students should be prompted to analyze their personal connection to text, explain their responses (rational and emotional), and consider texts from different points of view.

• how literary elements, techniques, and devices enhance and shape meaning: for example, metaphor brings a fresh perspective to the common; diction influences emotional response, persuasiveness, and meaning; hyperbole exaggerates for emphasis; sound devices can add to or disrupt the aesthetics of a text; imagery evokes sensory experiences in response to text

text/texts: Text and texts are generic terms referring to all forms of oral, written, visual, and digital communication:
  - Oral texts include speeches, poems, plays, and oral stories.
  - Written texts include novels, articles, and short stories.
  - Visual texts include posters, photographs, and other images.
  - Digital texts include electronic forms of all the above.
  - Oral, written, and visual elements can be combined (e.g., in dramatic presentations, graphic novels, films, web pages, advertisements).

diverse purposes: such as to inquire, to explore, to inform, to interpret, to explain, to take a position, to evaluate, to problem solve, to entertain

variety of sources: includes digital sources; students need to develop the language and tools to successfully navigate digital media (e.g., be familiar with terms and concepts such as browser, cookie, browsing history, hyperlinked text, thread, URL, fair use/copyright, plagiarism, posting etiquette, following social media, tweeting, privacy, digital identity, predictive text, evaluating digital resources, how search engines work, collaborative writing online, the language register of texting versus standard Canadian English, digital ownership, data mining) relevance: Students should be prompted to ask: Does it meet the purpose? Is it current? Does it add new information?

accuracy: Students should be prompted to distinguish fact from opinion and to consider the source of the information, whether it is supported by evidence, whether it is factually correct, and whether other sources support it.

reliability: Students should be prompted to consider the credibility of the source’s voice, whether it is a primary or secondary source, and the trustworthiness and authority of the source.

inquiry: asking creative and critical questions supported and inspired by texts

extend thinking: may include questioning and speculating, acquiring new ideas, analyzing and evaluating ideas, developing explanations, considering alternative points of view, summarizing, synthesizing, problem solving different features, forms, and genres of texts: vary depending on the purpose and audience of the text; students should be encouraged to focus on the relationship between form and function (e.g., considering the role in various texts of elements such as negative space in graphic novels, advertisements on websites, lighting and camera angles in film and photography, use of music, paragraph length, line breaks in poetry, silence and intonation in spoken word, and colour)

think critically, creatively, and reflectively: questioning, interpreting, comparing, and contrasting a range of texts (e.g., narrative, poetry, visual texts);
students should be encouraged to think outside the box, moving beyond the text and comparing texts; useful strategies include “exit slips,” “one star, one wish,” and quick activities to identify thinking

personal, social, and cultural contexts, values, and perspectives: Students should be prompted to understand the influence of family, friends, activities, education, religion, gender, age, place, settlement patterns, immigration, economic factors, and political events (local and beyond); to understand that authors write from a perspective influenced by such factors; and to understand the relationship between text and context.

how language constructs personal, social, and cultural identity: Our sense of individuality and belonging is a product of the language we use; oral tradition, story, recorded history, and social media; voice; cultural aspects; literacy history; linguistic background (English as first or additional language); register; and language as a system of meaning. Students should recognize that how we use language defines who we are in the world.

personal, creative, and critical ways: Students should be prompted to demonstrate comprehension, understanding of connection, and thoughtfulness; support positions with evidence/reasoning; identify and challenge their own assumptions; show awareness of their emotional and cognitive reactions and of their own point of view; and show they can consider texts from different point of views.

<th>Curricular Competencies – Elaborations</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>how literary elements, techniques, and devices enhance and shape meaning: for example, metaphor brings a fresh perspective to the common; irony can add social critique to an argument; allusion suggests connections between diverse elements; form often reflects function; diction influences emotion, persuasiveness, and meaning</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>story/stories: narrative texts, whether real or imagined, that teach us about human nature, motivation, and experience, and often reflect a personal journey or strengthen a sense of identity. They may also be considered the embodiment of collective wisdom. Stories can be oral, written, or visual, and used to instruct, inspire, and entertain listeners and readers.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>diversity within and across First Peoples societies: variety of worldviews and perspectives, diverse traditions, range of historical experiences, wealth of human experiences</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>exchange ideas and viewpoints: collaborating in large and small groups through activities such as think-pair-share, debates, four corners, quiet conversation, and lit circles (in which students take on new roles); using active listening skills and receptive body language; paraphrasing and building on others’ ideas; disagreeing respectfully; extending thinking (e.g., shifting, changing) to broader contexts (social media, digital environments)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>literary and informational texts: Students should be supported in planning, drafting, and editing multimedia and multimodal texts, such as paragraph compositions that include a theme (subject and author’s opinion) and TAG (title, author, genre); other examples of texts include opinion pieces, poetry, short stories, narratives, slams, spoken word texts, storyboards and comic strips, and masks</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>refine texts: using techniques such as adjusting diction and form according to audience needs and preferences, using verbs effectively, using repetition and substitution for effect, using active instead of passive voice, maintaining parallelism, adding modifiers, replacing be verbs with stronger verbs, varying sentence types, using precise diction, eliminating wordiness</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>audience/audiences: Students at this level expand their understanding of the range of audiences to include children, peers, authorities, and technical and business audiences, and are introduced to evidence-based writing for a variety of audiences.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>spelling: focus is on Canadian spelling (e.g., -our, -re, and –ize endings; doubled consonants in words such as counselled and travelled; words such as grey, licence)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>oral storytelling processes: creating an original story or finding an existing story (with permission), sharing the story from memory with others, using vocal expression to clarify the meaning of the text, using non-verbal communication expressively to clarify the meaning, attending to stage presence, differentiating the storyteller’s natural voice from the characters’ voices, presenting the story efficiently, keeping the listener’s interest throughout, using an expanding repertoire of techniques to enhance audience experience</td>
