

SPOKEN LANGUAGE 10 (2 credits)

Description

Spoken language skills are increasingly necessary in everyday, educational, and professional contexts. Spoken Language 10 provides opportunities for students individually and collaboratively to study, create, and use language to produce original pieces in a variety of modes. The course will provide students with opportunities for performance and public speaking. Spoken Language 10 will appeal to students who enjoy public performance or oral storytelling or who want to gain more experience and skill in this area. This course may be of particular interest to:

- students with strong verbal communication skills
- ELL students who want to develop their oral language skills
- students going into professions in which presentation skills are an asset
- students who may wish to help maintain oral traditions

The following are possible areas of focus in Spoken Language 10:

- Performance — suggested content/topics include spoken word/slam poetry, poetry recitation, oral storytelling, readers' theatre, radio/podcasts/video posts
- Oral tradition — suggested content/topics include oratory, local story knowledge, oral history

Suggested interdisciplinary links:

- Arts Education
- Applied Design, Skills, and Technologies

BIG IDEAS

The exploration of text and story deepens our understanding of diverse, complex ideas about identity, others, and the world.

People understand text differently depending on their worldviews and perspectives.

Texts are socially, culturally, geographically, and historically constructed.

Language shapes ideas and influences others.

Voice is powerful and evocative.

Big Ideas – Elaborations

- text/texts: Text and texts are generic terms referring to all forms of oral, written, visual, and digital communication:
 - Oral texts include speeches, poems, plays, oral stories, and songs.
 - Written texts include novels, articles, and short stories.
 - Visual texts include posters, photographs, and other images.
 - Digital texts include electronic forms of all the above.
 - Oral, written, and visual elements can be combined (e.g., in dramatic presentations, graphic novels, films, web pages, advertisements).
- story: narrative texts, whether real or imagined, that teach us about human nature, motivation, behaviour, and experience, and often reflect a personal journey or strengthen a sense of identity. They may also be considered the embodiment of collective wisdom. Stories can be oral, written, or visual and used to instruct, inspire, and entertain listeners and readers.

 - Oral, written, and visual elements can be combined (e.g., in dramatic presentations, graphic novels, films, web pages, advertisements).
- diverse purposes: contrast, synthesize, narrate, describe
- variety of sources: including print, digital, visual, artistic, and diverse cultural sources
- relevance: consider the extent to which material has credibility, currency, and significance for the purpose, and whether it resonates with personal experience
- reliability: consider point of view, bias, propaganda, and voices left out or omitted
- variety of contexts: distinguish between independent and collaborative settings, formal and informal situations
- multimodal texts: texts that combine two or more systems, such as linguistic, visual, audio, gestural, and spatial. They can be delivered via different media or technologies (e.g., spoken word/slam poetry, recitation, oral storytelling, readers’ theatre, debate, radio/podcast/social media, YouTube, interviews, voice-overs).
- Synthesize: combine ideas from two or more sources to construct a meaningful whole
- reflectively: includes metacognitive strategies such as identifying strengths and areas of focus, setting goals, making plans for improvement, and self-assessment
- Recognize how language constructs personal, social, and cultural identity: including differences in register (e.g., jargon, colloquialisms, vernacular, dialects, accent, diction, slang)
- Evaluate how elements, techniques, and devices enhance and shape meaning and impact: Students are encouraged to delve deeply into text and consider the function of elements, techniques, and devices, (e.g., voice, intonation, pacing, rhetorical devices, emotional and logical appeals)
- extend thinking: extend and apply thinking to broader contexts
- design processes: such as
 - conception, drafting, revising, editing, publishing, performing
 - selecting appropriate format and layout
- Reflect on, assess, and refine product to improve clarity, effectiveness, and impact:
 - creatively and critically manipulate language for a desired effect
 - consciously and purposefully make intentional stylistic choices (e.g., diction, rhetoric, effective visual aids)
- audience: Students expand their understanding of the range of audience to include children, peers, and professionals.

Content – Elaborations

- Creative spoken genres:
 - spoken word/slam poetry
 - recitation
 - oral storytelling
 - readers' theatre
 - debate
 - radio/podcasts/social media
- Oral language features and structures:
 - voice, tone, expression, volume, purpose, diction, enunciation
 - literal and inferential meaning
- First Peoples oral tradition:
 - In Canadian law, First Peoples oral history is valid evidence of ownership of the land.
 - The Supreme Court of Canada recognizes that First Peoples oral tradition is as important as written documents in considering legal issues.
- First Peoples oral texts: listen to and comprehend a wide range of authentic First Peoples oral texts reflecting a variety of purposes, messages, and contexts, including texts relating to life lessons, individual and community responsibilities (rites of passage, family histories, creation stories, formal speeches)
- protocols: First Peoples stories often have protocols (when and where they can be shared, who owns them, who can share them) because they are told by many people and passed down through generations. There are no recognized authors.
- bias: Consider questions such as:
 - Who is the writer?
 - Who is the speaker?
 - What is their “lens”?
 - What is the speaker’s motivation for creating the product?
 - When and where was the product created?
- propaganda: Consider questions such as:
 - What is the intended result?
 - What is the writer’s purpose/motivation?
 - Who is the targeted audience? Why?
 - How is the text misleading/inaccurate/biased?
- persuasive techniques:
 - repetition, parallel structure, rhetorical questions, irony, satire, parody, diction
 - ethical, logical, and emotional
- Conversational skills: turn taking, effective dialogue skills, questioning, active listening, paraphrasing
