

SPOKEN LANGUAGE 10 (2 credits)

Description

Spoken Language 10 is designed to support students in their development of spoken communication through processes of questioning, exploring, and sampling. The course builds students' spoken language competencies by introducing them to varied structures, forms, and styles of oral compositions and by providing opportunities for students to individually and collaboratively study, draft, and use language to create original pieces in a variety of modes. This area of choice will also provide students with opportunities for performance, storytelling, and public speaking.

The following are possible areas of focus in Spoken Language 10:

- Performance — Ideas include spoken word/slam poetry, poetry recitation, oral storytelling, readers' theatre, radio/podcasts/video posts related to First Peoples' themes.
- Professional Applications — Ideas include speech writing/presenting, proposals, interviewing, event facilitation, radio/podcasts/video posts (information items) related to First Peoples' themes.

  - Oral texts include speeches, poems, plays, oral stories, and songs
  - Written texts include novels, articles, and short stories
  - Visual texts include posters, photographs, and other images
  - Digital texts include electronic forms of all of the above
  - Oral, written, and visual elements can be combined (e.g., in dramatic presentations, graphic novels, films, web pages, advertisements)
- strategies: strategies used will depend on purpose and context; these may include making predictions, asking questions, paraphrasing, forming images, making inferences, determining importance, identifying themes, and drawing conclusions
- multimodal texts: texts that combine two or more systems, such as linguistic, visual, audio, gestural, and spatial. They can be delivered via a variety of media or technologies (e.g., music video, graphic novel, post-modern picture book, close-captioned film)
- forms: within a type of communication, the writer, speaker, or designer chooses a form based on the purpose of the piece. Common written forms include narrative, journal, procedural, expository, explanatory, news article, e-mail, blog, advertisements, poetry, novel, and letter
- formats: refers to the consideration of format choices including layout, sequencing, spacing, topography, colour
- structures: refers to the way the author organizes text (e.g., cause/effect, compare/contrast, order of importance, chronological sequence, problem/solution, circular or cyclical)
- features of texts: elements of the text are not considered the main body including: navigational aids (e.g., table of contents, index, glossary, bibliography, hyperlinks, titles, headings and sub-headings, prologue and epilogue, preface or forward, captions, footnotes and endnotes) and illustrations (e.g., in-lays, sidebars, photographs, graphs, charts, timelines, maps)
- build shared understanding and extend thinking:
  - listen to and receptively respond to feedback
  - respond to others' work with constructive feedback
  - be open-minded to divergent viewpoints and perspectives
  - ask questions to promote discussion
  - invite others to share their ideas
  - be willing to support personal perspectives
  - be willing to shift perspective
- refine texts to improve their clarity, effectiveness, and impact:
  - creatively and critically manipulate language for a desired effect
  - use techniques such as adjusting diction and form according to audience needs and preferences, using verbs effectively, using repetition and substitution for effect, maintaining parallelism, adding modifiers, and varying sentence types
- speaking and listening skills:
  - strategies associated with speaking skills may include the conscious use of emotion, pauses, inflection, silence, and emphasis according to context

Curricular Competencies – Elaborations

- structures: how text is organized
- narrative structures found in first Peoples’ texts: e.g., circular, iterative, cyclical

Content – Elaborations

- First Peoples’ oral traditions: are the means by which cultural transmission occurs over generations, other than through written records. Among First Peoples, oral traditions may consist of told stories, songs and/or other types of distilled wisdom or information, often complemented by dance or various forms of visual representation such as carvings or masks. In addition to expressing spiritual and emotional truth (e.g., via symbol and metaphor), these traditions provide a record of literal truth (e.g., regarding events and/or situations). They were integrated into every facet of life and were the basis of First Peoples’ education systems. They continue to endure in contemporary contexts. In Canadian law, First Peoples’ oral history is valid evidence of ownership of the land. The Supreme Court of Canada recognizes that First Peoples’ oral histories are as important as written documents in considering legal issues
- protocols related to ownership of First Peoples’ oral texts: First Peoples’ stories often have protocols (when and where they can be shared, who owns them, who can share them)
- reading strategies: there are many strategies that readers use when making sense of text; students consider what strategies they need to use to “unpack” text; they employ strategies with increasing independence depending on the purpose, text, and context; strategies include but may not be limited to predicting, inferring, questioning, paraphrasing, using context clues, using text features, visualizing, making connections, summarizing, identifying big ideas, synthesizing, and reflecting
- oral language strategies: includes speaking with expression; connecting to listeners, asking questions to clarify, listening for specifics, summarizing, paraphrasing
- metacognitive strategies: thinking about one’s own thinking; reflecting on one’s processes and determining strengths and challenges; students employ metacognitive strategies to gain increasing independence in learning
- writing processes: there are various writing processes depending on context; these may include determining audience and purpose, generating or gathering ideas, free-writing, making notes, drafting, revising and/or editing. There are many writing structures and processes; writers often have very personalized processes when writing; writing is an iterative process
- elements of style: stylistic choices that make a specific writer distinguishable from others; can include diction, vocabulary, sentence structure, tone
- usage: avoiding common usage errors (e.g., double negatives, mixed metaphors, malapropisms, and word misuse)
- conventions: common practices standard punctuation use, in capitalization, in quoting and in Canadian spelling
- literary elements and devices: texts use various literary devices, including figurative language, according to purpose and audience
